

The Institute for Educational Leadership welcomes the 2008-09 Fellows of the Education Policy Fellowship Program, their Site Coordinators, and special guests to the

WASHINGTON POLICY SEMINAR.

We would like to acknowledge the

GENEROUS SUPPORT FROM

Founded in 1947, Educational Testing Service (ETS) is a private, not-for-profit educational testing measurement organization and a recognized leader in educational research. ETS is dedicated to serving the needs of individuals, educational institutions, and government bodies in nearly 200 countries. The organization develops, administers, and scores more than 50 million tests worldwide. Some of ETS's most well-known assessment programs include the Graduate Record Examinations (GRE), Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL), The Praxis Series: Professional Assessments for Beginning Teachers, and for its work on some of the testing programs of The College Board, including the SAT and Advanced Placement (AP) programs. ETS maintains a Web site, www.ets.org, where additional information is available. In addition to this resource, ETS through the Research Report Series, Policy Information Center studies, and other channels disseminates its research activities to the national and international communities.

Under the leadership of President and CEO Kurt Landgraf, ETS employs more than 2,700 people, including 1,750 professional staff with training and expertise in education, instrument development, psychology, statistics, and psychometrics. Additional areas of staff expertise include the computer sciences, sociology, and the humanities. Approximately 775 staff members hold advanced degrees, 275 of whom hold doctorates. ETS is an equal opportunity employer and actively recruits female and minority staff members. ETS maintains offices in the United States and subsidiary offices around the world. Its main offices are located in Princeton and Ewing, New Jersey, and its U.S. regional offices are located in California, Puerto Rico, Oregon, Texas, Florida, and Washington D.C.

IEL would also like to thank the many resource people who will share their expertise and insights during the WPS program discussions and activities.
